2 tablespoons of vinegar
1 slice of fried bread

Bring everything to the boil over a medium heat, add the pieces of skate and two glasses of water and wait for about 15 minutes.

DOUGH:

In a large bowl, mix 4 eggs with the yeast, and add half of the zest, the 1 kg of flour, the sesame seeds, 1/2 jar of matalauva, and a little chopped almonds.

In a separate frying pan with 1/2 litre of oil, fry the aniseed (it must be golden brown) and strain it, so that we are left with the aniseed on one side and the oil on the other, which, together with the white wine previously tempered in the microwave, will be added to the dough that we have set aside together with 1/2 kg of sugar. At this stage we also add the warm water with a pinch of salt.

In another bowl, beat the rest of the eggs with the other half a kilo of sugar, 1/2 litre of oil, the other half of the lemon zest, 1/2 jar of matalauva and 1/4 of cinnamon, mix everything together very well until you have a uniform dough, not too thick that it runs off your fingers but without becoming liquid.

FINISH:

In a tray coated with oil, not too deep, place the dough, but not more than two centimetres high. Add a layer of ground almonds, another of cider and a final layer of filling.

Then decorate with almonds and cider (to taste). Finally, beat an egg, cinnamon and sugar (and a little sesame seed, optional) and pour it over the top with a brush to give it a shine.
